

From: Reuter, Suzanne D
To: mdsa1-list@usd.edu; mdsa2-list@usd.edu; mdsa3-list@usd.edu; mdsa4-list@usd.edu
Subject: New Podcast Resource
Date: Friday, January 06, 2017 10:43:00 AM

To all medical students:

The Undifferentiated Medical Student (TUMS) is an interview-based podcast about choosing a medical specialty and planning a career in medicine (available for free on iTunes and elsewhere).

The TUMS podcast is hosted by Ian Drummond, a 4th year medical student at Case Western Reserve University, who is currently struggling with the task of learning about all the specialties he didn't get to explore during his core clinical rotations, making the personal choice of which one is best for him, as well as trying to develop a sense of what he wants his career to look like well beyond residency. In an attempt to address these matters, issues with which many medical students struggle, Ian decided to do interviews with at least one physician from each of the 120+ specialties and sub-specialties listed on the AAMC's Careers in Medicine website and to record these conversations as a means of scaling the mentorship of these physicians so that all medical students struggling with career planning could benefit from their advice. As an example, here is the interview for internal medicine.

To medical students:

The podcast is freely available on iTunes, Stitcher Radio and Google Play Music. Of note, the audio quality of the podcast was produced such that interviews may be listened to at double speed without subsequent distortion of the dialogue. Thus, please enjoy at your preferred playback speed. Also, please feel free to reach out to Ian at ian@UndifferentiatedMedicalStudent.com for any reason.

To physicians:

If you are interested in being a guest on the show or if you are willing to connect Ian with other physician guests for the show, please reach out to Ian at ian@UndifferentiatedMedicalStudent.com. A list of specialties yet to be featured on the podcast can be found at www.UndifferentiatedMedicalStudent.com/suggestions.

Mr. Christian Essman, Director of Admissions
School of Medicine
Case Western Reserve University
216-368-3450

www.casemed.case.edu/admissions

Follow @CaseMedAdmiss on Twitter, Facebook and YouTube